* Electrical timing went wrong, so the times were reconstructed mannualy.
The process was so clumsy that result list was changed no less than three times, each time with a new winner. At first Hochleitner was figuring as the winner, then Minuzzo-Chenal, and finally Lanig (while the initialy proclaimed winner – Hochleitner ended fourth). Protests were multiplying (even the course setter Glatthard supported them), demanding new race to be held, which the organizers refused (the layer of snow was simply too thin).
